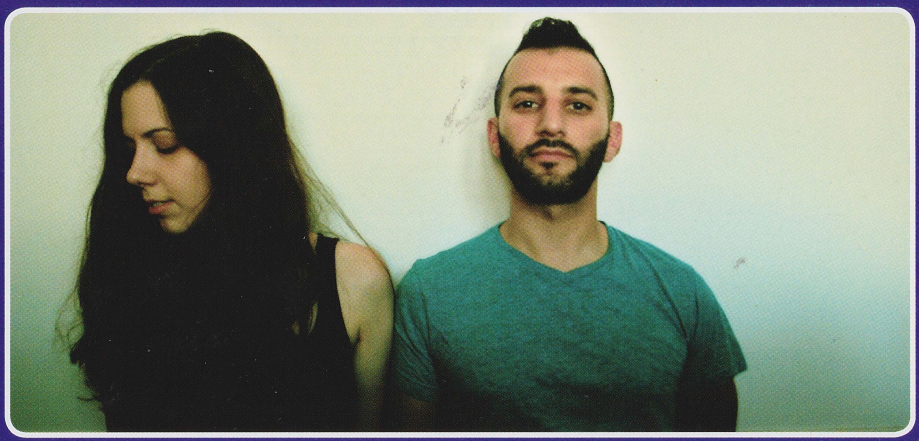
ShiSho

Shisho started way back in 2004, when Vivian (lead vocalist) was 7 years old, and younger sister Midge (backup vocals, keyboards, samples) was a resounding 4 years old. They played their first show 2 years later, and since then have played over 50 gigs ranging from standard club shows to girl scout gatherings to comic book conventions (they have been featured in Youngstown based comic book "Meow Wow! 2"). Recently, Shisho opened for Joe Jack Talcum of the Dead Milkmen, at the Beachland Ballroom, enabling them to play their version of "Punk Rock Girl" (modified to "Punk Rock Boy"). WRUW is happy to have Shisho kick-off this year's Studio-A-Rama.



Cereal Banter

Joseph Rafidi and Molly McKay cultivated Cereal Banter in Lakewood, OH in 2010. Cereal Banter is a bikini band (two piece) - the duo uses only synths and beats to output art-rock treats. Computers and loops were banned from the beginning. Their debut LP LIGHTS LIGHTS LIGHTS was recorded live to capture the spontaneity of human effort and human error. It features enthusiastic production, corybantic drumming and splattered-synth sounds. WRUW hopes you enjoy the sweet treats of Cereal Banter.

THE BUDDY PHONE

A Real Telephone. Works Indoors or Outdoors

Though this is merely a very clever toy, it is quite as serviceable for short distances as the most elaborate apparatus made and it is much less liable to get out of order or to need adjustment; in fact it cannot be rendered inefficient unless roughly handled. No troublesome battery, no intricate "hook-up." Can be put to practical use from one room to another, up or down stairs, around corners, etc. The patented sounding discs transmit and receive the voice perfectly, making it a really practical talking telephone. Set consists of two phones, transmission cord and full instructions. Price only 65c per set postpaid.

Lionel Jefferson Airplane

Lionel Jefferson Airplane was formed on West 107th street during the summer of 1999, emerging from the Kent, Ohio folk music boom

The Modulated Tones

Hailing from a depressingly small town called New Castle, and obsessing over psychedelic bands like The Velvet Underground, Spacemen 3, The Jesus and Mary Chain, The Black Angels (last year's Studio- A-Rama headliners) and A Place To Bury Strangers (this year's headliner), The Modulated Tones signal a new psychedelic dawn. Formed in the spring of 2009 by life-long friends Kevin Berlin and Gina Kantner, The Modulated Tones combine vintage equipment, circuit-bent effects, and custom tunings to create a fuzzed-out full wall of sound, impressive given their basic two-piece lineup (guitar and drums, with vocals). Playing over 100 shows in their first two years, and opening for bands such as The Black Angels, The Vandelles, and Quest For Fire, The Modulated Tones will be releasing their debut E.P. on Cleveland- based Bent Crayon Records. This duo will not be denied. Everybody must get droned.

Filmstrip

Cleveland's Filmstrip has been around for years, playing their unique brand of guitar rock, ranging from psychedelic to power pop to slacker rock. Featuring Dave Taha (vocals and guitar), Matt Taha (bass and vocals) and Nick Riley (drums), Filmstrip has been a mainstay of the Cleveland clubs, playing with bands like Pere Ubu and Cloud Nothings. Filmstrip first garnered media attention when they performed at the Sundance Film Festival in 2010. Since then they have toured the nation twice, released a full length debut LP and a split 7" with Fahri (from Milwaukee). WRUW is happy to include Filmstrip as part of this year's Studio-A-Rama.

SSBB

SSBB (Screaming Smoldering Butt Bitches to their friends and family) are a 3 piece all-girl punk band from Akron who revive punk rock at its purest and most raw form. Their debut CD (31 songs in 29 minutes!!!) covers a range of subject matter, from boys to partying to food, all from a decidedly female perspective. Full of witty innuendo and vulgarity, SSBB never take themselves too seriously, and now they're bringing their party to this year's Studio-A-Rama.

Ohio Civil War

"We're starting a hardcore band like the hardcore bands we listened to when we were kids. All the songs are going to be fast and short". With those marching orders, past members of The Chargers Street Gang, The Conservatives, and Proletariat Art Threat started the Ohio Civil War in March 2011. Now, in September 2011, the two guitar/bass/drums old school hardcore attack of Lachlan MacKinnon, Aaron Civil War, Matt Fish, and Matt Mullichak continues on the Mather Memorial stage. P.S. – Governor Kasich hates this band.

This Moment in Black History

This Moment in Black History can be traced back to a humble start in a Cleveland, OH basement in 2002, when the idea of a "personal" stereo experience was devised by Buddy Akita, Mike D'Amico (later replaced by Lawrence Daniel Caswell), Lamont Thomas, & Chris Kulcsar. 2003 saw the release of "The Cleveland Finger EP" on Exitstencil Records, with numerous 7", 12", cassettes, LPs and CDs following (including the latest "Public Square"), to positive reviews by publications such as Alternative Press, Vibe, Razorcake, Syscraper, and Vice. TMIBH has extensively toured the US, and has been to Europe for a successful 6 week jaunt, but had never played Studio-A-Rama. Until now. WRUW is proud to present local heavyweights This Moment In Black History as part of this year's Studio-A-Rama.

Long before the riot grrrl movement opened the floodgates for the widespread emergence of female artists in the male-dominated world of indie rock, the Columbus, Ohio-based trio Scrawl carved out their own tough-minded yet feminine niche within the underground community.

Formed by singer/guitarist Marcy Mays, bassist Sue Harshe, and drummer Carolyn O'Leary, the group debuted in the summer of 1985 by playing a 20-minute opening set for the Meat Puppets; a year later they entered the studio to record their debut effort "Plus, Also, Too".

Over the next decade, Scrawl toured hard, garnered rave reviews worldwide, broke bread with other legends of their day, and most importantly, cranked out transcendent high-powered jangle-pop. Unfortunately, that same decade saw an equal amount of music industry and record label upheaval, and after Elektra unceremoniously dumped them in 1998, drummer Dana Marshall (who had replaced Carolyn O'Leary) left for Sweden. Marcy Mays and Sue Harshe took a break, which, barring a show every year or so, has remained intact. They now have Jovan Karcic (Gaunt, Alwood Sisters) playing drums and by all accounts, have never sounded better.

The term "legendary" gets tossed around lightly, but not in this case!

WRUW is proud to welcome the legendary Scrawl back to Cleveland as part of this year's Studio-A-Rama.

Death is like noise; they are both prone to speculations about what or what not might be there, falsely percieved or deceptively real. They require a free fall of faith. In noise, you may choose to land lovingly on melody or you may stay lost in the technicolor grey sheets of teeth-on-glass distortion. If purgatory were an airport, Oliver would be the voice echoing through the abandoned terminals leading you to your departure, the sky above the runway filled with jets like a swarm of metallic locust. And that bass has got you feeling like riding a torpedo into Atlantis. It's enough to make the kids in back overtake security and rip up the front row seats and throw them into a bonfire because nobody can sit down to this shit anyway. This isn't the music to pick up the pieces, it's about calling bad luck bullshit and shattering that mirror into more pieces than there are empty coke bags in Brooklyn. Its safer than chemicals but it just might give you the itch to do them. It's a one sided argument; a thousand turbines aimed at a million megaphones in the bottom of the Grand Canyon aimed at your neighbor's window. Running lawnmowers dropped into a pool full of aluminum cans. A hail of light bulbs on a tin roof. This is infinte night, a dragstrip of mirrors, speed without end, amen.
